ICAC IN BRAZIL

Brazil and the State of Goiás are today recognized as major consumers and exporters of cotton. With an enterprising productive sector using the most advanced technology and a consolidated textile industry, they stand out for their importance as a player on the world market. A supplier of a high quality fiber, Brazil represents 5% of the world cotton trade. Classified as the world's seventh largest producer, Brazil produces around 1.3 million tonnes per year, exports to the value of 2.1 billion dollars and consumes 900,000 tonnes per year.

It is within this context that Goiás will host the 65th Plenary Meeting of the ICAC, the biggest cotton event in the world.

The 65th Plenary Meeting of the International Cotton Advisory Committee, whose theme will be the Social and Environmental Impacts of Cotton Production and Use, will be held in the presence of delegates from more than 42 cotton producing, manufacturing and consuming countries, together with Brazilian producers and manufacturers and major authorities from the World Cotton Chain, who will give lectures on the most important issues.

The production, industrialization and use of cotton throughout the world comprise millions of people and billions of dollars. The discussion and improvement of the environmental and social implications of the cotton chain are therefore of fundamental importance. This debate has immediate repercussions on the quality of life of those who work with cotton and upon the population in general.

There will be a parallel fair during the event, with companies and industries demonstrating trends and new technologies in the sector, such as: machinery and tools, equipment, supplies, technology and logistics.

For the social and cultural events, will be showed performance from Brazilian artists and various demonstration of our popular culture.

OFFICIAL INVITATION

The State Government of Goiás, the Brazilian Government and the Cotton Production Chain Institutions are very pleased to invite you all to the 65th Plenary Meeting of the ICAC from September 11 to 15 2006 in the city of Goiânia, the capital of the state of Goiás.

We are very honored to host an event of such importance to the global cotton sector, because it represents recognition for the work being developed by the Brazilian cotton producers and textile industry. The exchange of experience and knowledge during the event will certainly contribute to strengthening the performance of cotton growers and the industry throughout the world.

We are also sure your eyes will be enchanted by the beauties our Brazil and Goiás offer their visitors: beaches, ecological paradises, historical and world heritage cities and, particularly, a happy and hospitable people.

The Organizing Committee of the 65th Plenary Meeting of the ICAC, and the Goiás State Government are working hard for the event to be full of success, and for your stay in Brazil and Goiás to be full of comfort and safety.

We are waiting for you at the 65th Plenary Meeting of the ICAC. Our welcome starts now.

Alcides Rodrigues Filho
Governor of the State of Goiás

COTTON IN BRAZIL

Brazil, a source of quality cotton

The cotton market in Brazil, and everything that involves the production chain, is today a reference for competence and credibility. Supported by the highest technology in an increasingly enterprising scenario, the market consolidated its permanence at home and with growing exports, due to:

- The quality of its products and competitive prices;
- Phytosanitary control;
- Research of new cotton varieties;
- Mechanized harvest with minimum contamination;
- Technology and cotton grower training;
- Respect for the environment and society.
- Production per year: 1.3 million tonnes;
- 3.847 manufacturing industries;
- Exports: 2.1 billion dollars;
- The seventh largest producer in the world.

*Research made by Conab and Fundação GO in 2004.

The country works with plenty high quality raw material, a climate of socially and economically responsible economic generation; skilled, creative and versatile manpower. Goiás also stands out as the third largest cotton producer and eighth most competitive economy on Brazil, exporting 25% of its production to Asia and Europe through Traders and Merchants. Cotton production in the state has grown by more than 30% per year in the last two harvests.
