Egyptian Cotton Production (2000/2001-2005/2006)

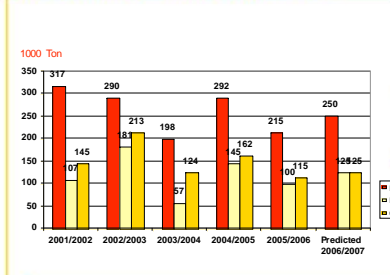

Egypt cropping system policy has changed with the implementation of the economic reform and structural adjustment program. By 1993, liberalized cropping policy had been adopted in the context of an overall reform program for the agricultural sector, the government allowed farmers to make their own decisions over what to grow, as a result, economic incentives and competitive consideration became the driving forces.

The Extra-long share is about 25% of Total Production.
